Hanging out with friends and bored, trying to decide a movie

Say I am hanging out with friends, trying to decide on a movie to watch. We look through Netflix but cannot find a specific movie that piques all of our interests. So, instead we try a new way to find a new movie. Logging in through Twitter, our app scans one of my friend's tweets and assigns a certain sentiment percentage to that person. We as a group decide what genre we are interested in, and can select it from a genre drop down list. The appliication will return 5 suggested movies and shows that might fit the mood based on the recent Twitter history of our friend.